CAMBRIDGE HIGH AND LATIN SCHOOL

Dedication

This book we humbly dedicate to the members of the class of 1945, who yesterday were boys in school with us, today are men in the service of their country. With us they imbibed the ideals of liberty, and justice. In the armed forces, they are serving willingly to preserve those ideals throughout the world. To these members of our class, we look up with pride and also with the hope that we too, if called upon, will prove equally staunch and loyal to the fundamental principles of life, love of God, our country and our fellowmen.

Prologue

These have been four momentous years. Time will not soon dim their memory. The Class of 1945 will always recall its high school days as they were lived against a background of historic events. That the pleasant associations and joyous episodes of those years shall not be forgotten, this is your record of them. . . .

JOAN McPARTLIN.

The class of 1945 takes this opportunity to express its appreciation of the leadership and guidance of Mr. Downey in all our activities. His fatherly wisdom and interest has made the school under him the true complement of the home.

Class Song

Searching for wisdom, gift of those of old
Which to keen minds the Muses will unfold,
Leaving pursuit of gay enticing play,
We trod the upward path to lightened day.

Tuned by the martial strain of years of war,
While on we chant Athena's theme of yore,
Those who boldly march to death on bloody field,
Ever in courage strong, will never yield.

Forth we advance to fill each destined part,
Spurred by the will of good in loving heart.
Not led by earthly monarchy or rod,
Builders with faith and reverence for God.

T. SGOUROS

To a Wartime Class

If peaceful former years were with us now
We too might write of surging floods from reedy streams
Of mountains from grains of sand, and faith in future dreams;
And with carefree hearts and joyous song, we might somehow
In peace assemble here, still hidden from our ken
The word of sudden death that falls from bluebell sky,
Of brother's hate of brother, of shattered hopes, piled high
As castles in the air, which broken, never rise again.

But stark in memory stand those sad and evil deeds
Which those who love must crush, leaving familiar things
To split the sky with splintering gleam of deadly wings
Or cruise the ocean's depths, mid rocks and tangling weeds.
We may not look ahead, in light of rosy dawn,
To dwell in fields serene, a promise sure as day;
But we through ruin dark must light our future's way
By sacrificial faith till murky night is fled and gone.

So we shall not forget the ways of wisdom taught
By older friends who freely gave to us their store
Of high ideals, and those with lofty goal who bore
To us the wondrous treasure the ages all have wrought;
And we shall bear their words to heal a war-torn world,
Let light shine forth again, dispel the wrecker's night,
And led by knowledge, cheered by hope, shall gain the sight
Of fields all gold and green where once the clashing war-clouds swirled.

ANN WALKER.

In September, 1941, a few months before the United States was hurled into world wide conflict, the Class of 1945, with faltering step, entered into the difficult conflict of unknown fields of learning and a completely new school program. Although education was set as the main goal, the chief occupations of the first few months were trying to recall elusive locker combinations, finding one's way through the uncharted corridors, and remembering where one should be and why he should be there. On December 8th, the day after Japan's dastardly attack on the American Navy anchored at Pearl Harbor, students were assembled to hear President Franklin D. Roosevelt invoke Congress to declare a state of war. It was far from the minds of any member of the class that before we had completed our four (or five, as the case may be) years in Cambridge High and Latin School, many of our newly found associates would be in uniform, fighting to protect the right of American youth to enjoy schooling. Composers, at this time, copyrighted many songs with a patriotic note, one of the most popular being "Remember Pearl Harbor," in commemoration of that treacherous assault which shall live forever in the minds of millions. The tedious year finally came to a close, and seems very brief in retrospect.

After an even briefer summer's rest, during which time the United States Marines opened the second round of the Pacific battle by starting on their victorious march from island to island, starting with the historic attack on Guadalcanal, the class of '45, now experienced veterans of life in C. H. L. S., entered upon the second phase of their struggles with languages, mathematics, and sciences. Latin scholars, while reading in their daily papers of the successes of MacArthur in the South Pacific, read of the successes of another general, Julius Caesar, in his victorious campaign in Gaul.

Now that we had passed through the first stages of the trials of high school life, we experienced a feeling of superiority. No longer were we at a loss when asked for the location of a room, and one of our chief forms of amusement was to watch the inexperienced Freshman scamper about in quest of the rooms.

It was at the beginning of our sophomore year that the school committee, moved by motives unknown to us, performed the unfortunate act of merging the football teams of the two city rivals, Cambridge High and Latin School and Rindge Technical School. The results of this merger were unsatisfactory, and the plan was abandoned for other sports, Latin and Rindge assuming their own identities once again.

The songwriters of the period continued to be moved by a patriotic strain, and their products were such as "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition."

During the summer of 1943 many students held lucrative war jobs, and there was some fear lest they should decide to discontinue their schooling, but this proved to be needless worry, for when September again rolled around, we found all of our friends again roaming the now familiar corridors of C.H.L.S.

Just as the United States had become highly organized to carry out the pursuit of World War II, we had become organized to carry on in the most difficult phase of our high school work. Some of us explored the unknown mysteries of chemistry in the laboratories, while others investigated the hieroglyphics of the ancients under the modern name, shorthand. When the second floor corridors were crowded a little more than usually, it was an indication that one of the third-floor chemistry classes was making hydrogen sulphide gas, and when most of the traffic was on the third floor, one could assume that someone had failed her cooking test in the basement rooms.

Although many of the social activities were curtailed during our Sophomore year, they were resumed during our Junior year, and several of the class "stepped out" for their first time to formals. The most important to the Junior was the Junior Prom, held in the Hotel Commander late in April, but we were also well represented at the other formals during the year.

Perhaps the most important day of the year was that in which we elected officers for the first time as an entire class. After a hard, spirited campaign, when the dust of the battle had cleared, the results were announced as follows:

President—Fred Sateriale	Secretary—Joseph Sheehan
Vice-President—Walter Lyons	Treasurer—James Lakis

Besides its being a successful year socially, our Junior year was also a banner year for the baseball team, which gave such a good performance that it was selected to participate in the Baseball Tournament at Braves Field. The track team gave a spectacular performance, winning the first State Championship since the inauguration of that sport in this school.

Americans, having now experienced more than two years of war, tired of songs which reminded them of the catastrophic struggle, and changed their preference to such care-dispelling ditties as "Mairzy Doats."

As we neared the three-quarters mark in our struggle with learning, the Allies finally completed their long period of preparation for assault, and on June 6, 1944, a day that will live in memory as long as December 7, 1941, the first allied troops landed on the beaches of Normandy, giving to the whole world a bright ray of hope that Hitlerism would soon crumble and meet its doom. With this optimistic feeling, we left the now dear portals of Cambridge High and Latin at the end of our Junior year, and although we had earned a rest, many of us gave up our summer vacation to work at diverse occupations which would help to shorten the war.

In a year of which one of the most outstanding events was the unprecedented election of Franklin D. Roosevelt for a fourth term as the president of the United States, the class of 1945, now an assemblage of sage Seniors, advanced to the commanding heights of the third floor home rooms, after wondering, as we climbed the interminable stairs, why they didn't put the youthful Freshmen on the third floor and save the aged Seniors many unnecessary ascents. By this time we were thoroughly acquainted with one another, and most of the time spent strolling from one class to the next was taken up by the exchange of friendly salutations.

However, before the end of the year, many of our close friends had sacrificed the cap and gown for the gun.

The Senior elections were held early in the year, after a very brief campaign. The results closely paralleled the results of our Junior election, and were as follows:

President .....Fred Sateriale
Vice President .....Walter Lyons
Secretary .....Joseph Winn
Treasurer .....James Lakis

The first indication of our impending graduation was our being measured for caps and gowns, early in December. Soon after this the class ring was chosen, and the Ring Committee accepted orders during the month of January. The Ring Committee office provided a haven for those who had anti-homeroomitis, and two-thirds of the Senior class could be found there every day, diligently selecting their rings.

Graduation preparations were in full swing during the time that we had our pictures taken, and for a short time we became connoiseurs of photography, passing severe criticism on each other's proofs.

In the social field, we enjoyed a highly successful year. The first of the formals was the Dramatic Club Formal, which was followed by the G. A. A. Formal and K. B. Formal, where Fred Sateriale's orchestra aptly supplied the music, and finally the Senior Reception. Throughout the year we also enjoyed a few informals, with the music again being usually supplied by Fred Sateriale's orchestra.

In March, the Senior popularity poll was held, the results of which are elsewhere in this book. At this time we also voted to have something unique, and approved the suggestion of a Senior Banquet.

Besides the usual preparations for graduation, those preparing for College Board Examinations had an added worry. On April 8, they heaved a sigh of relief, and returned to natural life.

Ironically, one of the most popular songs of our last days at Cambridge Latin School was "Don't Fence Me in" and reports of "Robin Hood" were also prevalent. Characteristic of some students mode of studying was the title of another popular song, "I Dream of You."

At the time that the Allied armies were smashing at the approaches to Berlin, and we had approached very close to the climax of our four years of high school, a black cloud dimmed the bright rays of hope entertained by the world. On April 12, 1945, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt came to the end of his great struggle and passed away, just as his expectations of world peace seemed about to be fulfilled.

Finally at the end of four fleeting years, we come to that long-anticipated event — graduation. However, our pleasure of success is not unmixed with sorrow as we fondly recall pleasant occurrences which are now pleasant memories, out of our grasp forever. We will always remember our high school career, looking back in fond reverie, as with a sincere note of sorrow we leave the hallowed halls of Cambridge High and Latin School and take our place in the bitter struggles of this ever changing world.

PROPHECY
T. SECUROS '45

With one last, dying cough, our model-T heliocopter settles toward earth. The prospects for our trip look rather dismal. With a thump we land beside the 1960 World's Fair grounds.

Dashing out across the field in their maintenance car, Elliott Croft and his assistants, Austin Smith, Claude Doucet, Edward Leary, and Dinny Downing, come to our rescue as we clamber out. In our short-cut across the airport, we see Louise Kevorkian, Janet Fish, Margaret Lovett, Ann Lyons, Olga Swinamer, and Gloria Babish preparing to take off on their trip home to Alaska. High in the tower Jack Collins, John O'Brien, and Jimmy Hughes are busy signalling in Bob Brown's passenger-plane on which Marguerite Chandler is the hostess. While passing through the waiting-room, we see Olga Pimentel typing the flight schedule for Robert Wise, the airline manager. The stewardesses for the next two flights are Sophie Misloski and Barbara Leighton.

Outside the waiting-room we step up on the long ramp leading to the fair grounds. This marvelous feat of modern architecture was designed by Herbert Shlein and Robert Berman.

We pass through the electric-eye door where Mortimer Sullivan and Raymond McCree are selling tickets. Pat Cardillo and Hollis Brown are standing by selling the Guide Book edited by Billy Supple. Our track stars, Harrington, Brathwaite, and Downey, are having a work-out pushing the sedan chairs.

We come first to the United States Building, before which stands a statue of Roosevelt done by Diana Kanavos. Entering the building are our Congresswoman, Sophia Miskevitch, and our state representative, William Kopstock. In the main corridor hangs a mural by Tom Sgouros depicting the history of America while the geography of America is shown in Sidney Hiller's exhibit.

Entering the aquacade from the underground promenade, we hear Fred Sateriale and his Royal Cantabrigians swinging into the overture. Corine Carwile, Anthony Agras, Irene Swyers, and Jim Hurley are there with piano, violin, trumpet, and drums. While the chorus sings "Three Little Fishes," Mary Messinger, Patsy Shea, and Jackie Harding swim toward the middle of the pool. Then Joe Winn makes a superb dive from a height of one hundred feet, through the circle formed by the other swimmers, as Elizabeth Miller, Dot Sullivan, Marion Crocker, Louise Talanian, and Mary Pat O'Brien sing "Flying High." During intermission we see Barbara Sullivan and her husband trying to find the popcorn man, who turns out to be John Cheevers. Later in the program, Art Reading and Tony Frasca put on an amazing exhibition of endurance in swimming.

Our next stop after the Aquacade is the International Hall which houses the French Building. Paul Pearlson is giving, in the French language, a lecture on France's part in World War II. In the souvenir shop are French dolls with clothes designed by Margaret Nieh and Connie Martin. Upstairs in the Spanish-American wing we hear John Loughborough's talk on Brazil, which is illustrated with three-dimensional vision film perfected by Marvin Rosenberg. In the book section is found Anthony Travers' book entitled "The Advance of Missionary Work in Equador." Winifred Taylor and Beverly Blackhurst are in charge of the display put on by children of Peru. In the Russian Restaurant managed by Helen Nimirowski, Leslie Melville and Rosario Messina, representatives of England and Italy respectively, are having lunch.

At the concert sponsored by the American Piano Company, Mavis Bailey, Cecilia Bennett, Marie Condon, and Jestina De Allie play a two-piano quartet. A duet is played later by Anita Deveau and Mary Eddy. In the audience are Frances Hibbler and Claire Fitzpatrick, who are comparing notes on the performers while Elizabeth Flanagan applauds appreciatively. After speaking to Marjorie MacKinnon, we see Irene Magnus with Theresa Mello selecting a new piano.

As we enter the Medical Center, Merlyn Owens has just begun a demonstration of her new technique in dealing with fractures. We see on the bulletin board that Louise Bigelow has finished her series of lectures on interesting developments in sulfa drugs. Theresa Maxwell, a leader in Red Cross work, is available with her assistants, Audrey Hayes, Dot Linton, and Margaret Tobin, to tell of her most recent work in China. In the dental department, with the aid of Priscilla Goodman and Ann Matulis, Doctors Alan Krasnoff and Howard Smolar are displaying modern dental apparatus.

Noticing Virginia Horton's name outside an attractive tea-room, we go in and are met by Hilda Cordeiro, the hostess. Mary De Cillis and Evelyn Grossi come in to discuss business with Mary Teresa Toomey, the third of the three managers.

After a soda at Philip Jamieson's fountain we get settled for the fashion show sponsored by J. J. Martin's world-famous Style Shoppe. Joe Roche announces the pretty models: Betty Alden, Doris Stratton, Marilyn Viering, Barbara Sheehan, Evelyn Mix, and Ruth Benson. The costumes have been designed by Bob MacDonald, Jean Barnard, Lillian Dragun, and Herbert Lurio. An attractive setting was designed by Marion Day and Marion Bekos. Isabel Gudas and Ann Corcoran are seen buying for the Moderne Store owned by Jean Larsen, Peggy Fraser, and Jeanne Francoeur.

We make our way eagerly to the Book Fair, where, we have been told, we will find Joan McPartlin's latest book, "Life in Bedlam." The first book we see is Bishop Bond's best seller, "The White Road." Among the history books is "The Class-Room History of Europe" by Marie Silva. Both the Griggs and Silberman Publishing Company and the Jeffers, Lucey Publishing House have large selections of books on display. The award-winning bookplate was drawn by Joe Wenckus for the book. "My Best." by John Willson, Th.D. On the wall are posters by Jean Morrissey and Claire Masse advertising the fair. Elizabeth Connelly is in charge of the modern novels.

After Ann Walker's lecture on "Why Authors Go Mad," we see Ardys Karbaum's new play "Star Gazer." John Linnehan and Marjorie MacArthur are excellent as the leads, with Natalie Dolloff, Edith Collymore, and Yvonne Bulger giving good support. This is another outstanding example of James Kapelos' ability as a director. Shirley Kramer has done an effective job with the make-up.

Later in the agricultural building we are shown discoveries made on Monny Babin's scientific ranch. The new hybrid soy bean can be attributed to work done by Mary McMenimen and Elizabeth Zacharchuk. From corn, Francis Oppedisano has developed an antidote against food poisoning. Gill Silvestre is seen buying cattle for his own ranch.

Later in the demonstration beauty salon which is under the direction of Helen Walsh, Jane Olszewska and Mildred Hinsman are seen trying out Kathleen Ifill Wave-Set. The famous manicurist, Helen Skafas, is to be present later in the day.

Passing the administration building we see Florence Shallow, Christina Crane, Rose De Milia, and Alice Gray at work at the switchboard. Virginia Holmes is in charge of the operators.

Although the program is well on its way, we arrive at the Fantasy on Ice in time to see Mary Downing and Alice Fitzgerald do some acrobatics on skates. Mary Goffredo and Ruth Humes are both in the ballet. The routine for the latter was taught by Pat Donovan.

When our feet are too tired to carry us farther, we collapse inside the motion-picture theater. The musicale, which is shown first, was produced and directed by Jimmie Nevins. The costumes have been designed by Florence Kidston, Betty McCusker, and Rosemary Ryan, and the lyrics were written by Kenneth Townsend. The famous team, Ralph Powers and Ruth Powers, did the stage scenery. While the chorus with Hilda Davis, Virginia Nikas, Demetria Panagapoulas, and Eleanor Chew are singing, Art Foster, Louise Monahan, Ray Foley, Jessie Cafasso, Diane Perin, and Mary Foster whirl about in the dances. Doris Reagan and Margaret Ciccola play the heroines.

The voice of John Vigneron, one of our leading news-commentators, is heard in the news-reel which follows. There are shots of fireman Paul Carroll's brave rescue of Betty Stone from her burning hat shop. We see Clare Shulz taking notes for John Coughlin's newspaper. The scene shifts to show Melvin Mahlowitz in his huge new grocery store. Dorothy Dinan, his assistant, is seen busy in the office.

We enjoy seeing many Cambridge men at the reunion of veterans of World War II. Carleton Clench and Joe Stanley are chatting with Ed Conley. As we stop to say "Hello" to Jimmy Lakis, Joe Sheehan, John Lyons, and Ralph Smith join us. John Conant and Francis Kennedy appear to be settling the economic situation of America. Walter Di Giovanni, sharing honors with Dick Dale, is surrounded by a circle of admirers. Paul Foley, Louis Gualtiere, and Howard Dilworth are greeting old friends.

On our way from the reunion, we stop in at Mary Foley's Photography Studio, where Hazel Hopkins and Alice Karagozian are officiating at the camera. Margaret Greenland is tinting a portrait of Edna Kasef, an accountant. Irene Romaniecka is consulting Noreen Cotter about their bookkeeping system.

The Good and Stilla Typewriter Company is conducting a contest to determine the world's champion in typing. Marilyn Shine carries away the honors, but Violet Brander, Lorraine Costa, Lillian Levy, and Marie Colburn have fingers almost as nimble. Some visiting stenographers, Jenny Frangioni, Agnes Glennon and Madelon Jordan, look on with admiration. Peggy Puddister, Ann Coleman, and Eileen Leary prove themselves to be short-hand artists.

On the esplanade we see Mary Herlihy who is just as beautifully dressed as she used to be. Edith Reading and Jackie Doyle pass us on their way to do a folk dance at the International Hall. Edna Williams is walking toward the Medical Center accompanied by several of her student-nurses from Johns Hopkins Hospital. Rosalie Butrym, Catherine Carroll, and Beryl Cox are there discussing the play which they just saw. Barbara Walker and Margaret Casey are with Helen Campbell and Barbara Carrington. They all are specializing in various fields at the hospital.

As we depart, we see the nursery conducted for children of visitors at the fair. Theresa D'Aveni, Dorothy Butler, and Joanne Sussman are leading a group of them in games, while Anita Wentzell is helping Margaret Hughes entertain some small children. Eileen Dewire and Cynthia Greene are planning some work for Evelyn Cherelli and Charlotte Christian to direct.

As our heliocopter, now repaired rises into the darkening skies, we reflect with delight on the success of our classmates who were seen at the fair. We are certain, also, that our Alma mater can be proud of those who were not seen, but have become worthy citizens of a promising land.

War Work has gone on in the school for another year. Everyone is now enrolled in one branch or another

The Junior Red Cross you will find recorded elsewhere. The course in Foods and Nutrition, which was instituted last year, continues under the tutelage of Mrs. O'Neill.

Health and First Aid has been introduced, with Miss Brown teaching, and almost all junior and senior girls taking part.

Mr. Conlon, a returned veteran, is conducting a course in Maps and Charts, planned as war training for boys, and opened also to a few girls.

Other veterans, Mr. Ronan, Mr. Parry, and Mr. O'Brien, representing respectively, Army, Navy, and Marines, are giving Pre-induction Training, which we think is to prove very valuable.

Codes and Typing is still another new course. This is conducted by Miss O'Connor, Mr. McKenna, and Miss Halloran.

In addition to all these the seniors have spent this year $6018.85 in the War Bond and Stamp drive.

Under the sponsorship of Miss Alice A. Ward, The Junior Red Cross has completed another successful year in their effort to help others. With the help of the Junior Red Cross Student Council, 100% enrollment has been attained.

A group of girls very diligently gave their services in preparing for the War Fund Campaign. Another group of girls also participated in gathering matter for the Blood Plasma Notices at the Cambridge Gas and Electric Light Company.

A few of the accomplishments which the Junior Red Cross has attained were the making of two afghans, one laprobe, sixty-four utility bags, and some New Havens.

Because of the unselfish desire to help others the Junior Red Cross will continue to do its part in helping the American soldier as long as the necessity for such help exists.

This year, the Chess Club has had an almost perfect season, highlighted by the winning of the championship by its second team. You should understand that each team plays for the championship in its own class. Those deserving commendation for their excellent playing are: John Loofborrow, John Maciel, Melvin Mahlowitz, Ann Walker, Arnold Schultzberg, Earle Rosenberg, Arthur Schatz, and Jack Arranson. As a result of this victory the school will be presented with a book in the near future.

The first team, headed by Howard Smolar, twice runner-up in the annual Inter-scholastic Chess League Tournaments, narrowly missed winning the league championship, and ended the season in a very close second place. Others who played on this team are: Robert Brown, William Klopstock, Paul Pearlson and Marvin Rosenberg. They too, should be commended for their brilliant efforts.

The officers of the club were: John Loofborrow, President; Paul Pearlson, Vice-president, and John Maciel, Secretary-treasurer. Smolar will represent C. H. L. S. in the annual high-school chess competition to be played in May. Other members who will leave the club this year are Yola Forte, Ardys Karbaum, Dianne Perin, Herbert Schlein, Joanne Sussman, and Louise Waldfogel.

It is our hope that the younger members and under classmen of the present, will form a solid nucleus for the chess club of the future.

The Dramatic Club started a very successful season with a formal dance at the Hotel Commander in October. All the socially prominent of the school attended and the affair was enjoyed by all.

Next on its list of activities, the club attended "Romeo and Juliet" at Emerson College which starred many former members of our club. This was followed on our list of outside activities by a trip to the Boston Opera House to see Katharine Cornell and Brian Aherne in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." Those of the club who attended enjoyed the play tremendously and a few of the members obtained autographs that they will cherish from the stars.

In April, Miss Hartigan arranged for members of the club to pay a visit to the Boston Art Museum. Miss Alice McGinnis, after pointing out the high spots of the museum, lectured on Oriental masks and costumes.

Scattered throughout our meetings this year we had many outstanding programs given by the Alumni. Bob Guest did readings one afternoon and then brought his cast for a preview of a show that he later put on at Emerson. Elliot Duvey, director of the Tributary Theater, spoke one afternoon on the "Development of the American Theatre."

Members of the club took part this year in the programs in the auditorium. The Christmas program was outstanding among these. We presented a series of choral group tableaus that we hope will now become traditional.

On May 18, the Dramatic club will sponsor a variety program starring many alumni and students.

We of the Dramatic club extend our deep appreciation to Miss Hartigan for her help in preparing our programs and for arranging for us to have such an enjoyable year.

Every organization has had to cope with the many problems and handicaps this war has brought about, but in spite of this, the G. A. A. has enjoyed a very successful year.

From the Freshmen "Get-Acquainted" dance in the gym the Boy-Girl dance, the Formal, to the coming Informal, the year has been one of many good times shared by all the members.

In all activities the teams proved to be tops, and beyond a doubt, they are all good sports come victory or defeat. May that spirit continue through the years to come!

The officers wish to thank sincerely Miss Alice Brown, who solved our problems, gave her time and advice, and worked with us to bring us this year of success.

During the past year, the 37 members of K-B have worked industriously at their meetings, knitting an afghan for the Red Cross. The K-B Winter Formal was held on February 9 with more than 100 couples in attendance at the Hotel Commander, and the receipts of this party were sufficient to provide for the club scholarship. The closing events of the year were a picnic at Point Shirley, in Winthrop, and a small dancing party for members and their escorts on May 25, also held at the Commander.

When Miss Teresa Buckley, one of the faculty advisors for many years, resigned from school after her marriage, she was succeeded by Miss Mary Young, who now serves with Miss Ethel McElroy. Student officers during the year were Joan McPartlin, president, and Eileen Leary, secretary.

GIRLS' BASKET BALL TEAM

Miss Brown, Janice Banks, Claire Rodgers, Jean Masse, Margaret Dinan
Yola Marcotte, Muriel Nevins, Lucille Grimm, Mabel Grimm, Mary Hildebrand

Speed, and good teamwork are the words to describe this year's basket ball team. The girls have had an undefeated and untied scoring record; this reflects on their coach, Miss Alice Brown. The team extends its deepest appreciation to Miss Brown for all she has taught them during the year.

BASEBALL

The Girls' Baseball team has been one to be proud of in the past, and this year's team lives up to that tradition. A rigorous schedule lies ahead of them, but you may be sure the team will come out on top. The games against Arlington, Belmont, Somerville, and Waltham will keep you baseball fans "on-the-watch" from the start to the finish.

SWIMMING

The G. A. A. continued its swimming classes this year on Thursday evenings at the Y. M. C. A. The girls showed their great interest in the state's "learn-to-swim" campaign, by attending the weekly instruction.

Although this year's team won only two of their games, they always gave a good account of themselves against strong opposition.

We opened the season with a 6-0 win over Gloucester, with Tony Frasca scoring on a pass from Johnny Vigneron. The following week the powerful B. C. High Team paved the way for their undefeated season by scoring a 12-0 win over Latin at Russell Field.

Next on the list was the highly touted Somerville club. The boys turned in their best game of the year only to drop a heart-breaking 7-6 decision.

As the season progressed it was the lack of reserve strength more than anything else that kept the team from being a winner. On Columbus Day city rival Rindge avenged last year's defeat by upsetting Latin 6-0. Late in the season we took an easy 31-12 decision over an outclassed Norwood team.

The team was composed mostly of seniors, with the senior lettermen receiving sweaters and letters. These were Bill Braithwaite, Jim Lakis, Gil Sylvestre, Claude Doucet, Louis Gualtieri, George Lucey, Johnny Vigneron, Tony Frasca, the all scholastic halfback, Art Scalese, Pat Cardillo, Joe Winn, Ray Roley and Walter Lyons.

Under class lettermen were next year's captain Kenny Lyons, Earl Daurie, Bill Cusick, Steve Biddle, Jack Cawley, and Basil "Muscles" Bourque, a freshman.

A squad of approximately sixty candidates, including five veterans of last year's tournament club, were on hand to greet Mr. Foley as baseball was called out at C. H. L. S.

Sparked by the outstanding play of co-captains Tony Frasca and Patsy Cardillo, we should be strong contenders for Suburban League honors. Ready for a second year of league competition is the veteran battery of "Lefty" Leary and the versatile Cardillo, supported by such team mates as Joe Winn, Johnny Paredes, Gene Amaral and the sturdy back-stop Jim Linehan. The experienced Ray Foley will once more take able command of the hot corner, with all-scholastic Tony Frasca moving over from second to cover the short-stop position. George Costa at second and either Stephen Biddle or Joe Winn at the initial sack will round out an aggressive infield.

The out-field positions are not yet decided upon with Johnny Paredes the only returning veteran. However, Coach Foley has such material as Bob Heffernan, Earl Daurie, Ken Lyons, Bill Goldberg, and Jack Lee with which to form his out-field.

Coach John Culhane built a great hockey team about a nucleus of four veterans this year. Foremost of these were Co-captains Tony Frasca, all-scholastic left wing of 1944, and Dinny Downing. These two constituted the best scoring combination of the league. George Costa and Earl Daurie formed a stalwart defense against whom few clubs were able to succeed. Our Goalie, Ray Foley, did a swell job in the nets. The other member of the starting team, Art Foster was a great aid to the success of the first line.

Coach Culhane deserves a great deal of praise from the student body, for making the team what it is.

In the last game of the year with Belmont High, Frasca, six points behind Jack Kelley of Belmont scored seven points, thus winning the G. B. I. scoring crown by one point.

Then there came a long list of boys who made up in fight what they lacked in experience. This determination to win went a long way in making the team the surprise that it was.

K. Lyons, Sgouros, Amaral, Laredes, Cardillo, Leary, Downey

The basket ball team, under the able leadership of Mr. Kozlowsky, had a pretty fair season. The Co-captains John Paredes and Patsy Cardillo formed the nucleus of the team which had Eddie Leary, Jimmy Lynch, and John Vigneron, and Gene Amaral to round out the line-up. The record for the season was seven wins to five losses. The most exciting game was the home game against Newton. Latin, under terrific tension, held the undefeated Newton powerless for three quarters. Then after losing several key men, Latin finally succumbed.

Other letter men who saw plenty of action were: Kenny, Lyons, Foster, Downey, Agnetta, Foley, and Wally Lyons and Sgouros.

The managers Roseman, Supple, and Horan did much to keep coach Kozlowsky's record straight.

Next year, with Paredes as captain, and several lettermen returning, Latin can look forward to a promising season.

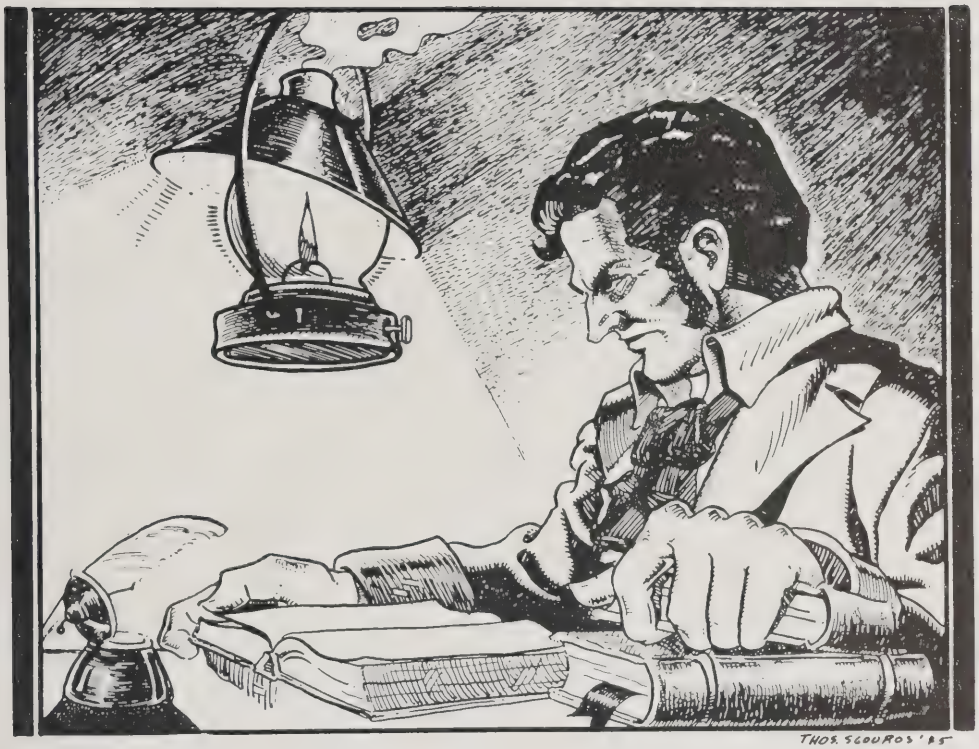
Our track team may not be the biggest, but you will have to go a long way before you can find one with better talent and spirit. Our team this year annexed second place in the State Meet. This is almost the same team which last year won Cambridge's first State Championship.

The outstanding performer is our star captain Bill Braithwaite, who duplicated last year's feat, and won the 600-yard run again. Bill also contributed to our success by placing in the broad jump. John Harrington another veteran, who has been on the winning column for two years, placed third in the 300 yards against stiff competition. Johnny is also leadoff man of the relay team. Art Scalise, back for a second year, placed second in the broad jump, and also won a place in the dashes. Anthony Travers our hurdler just lost out for a place in the hurdles. Tony also made an excellent showing in the high jump. Jimmy Downey was the only other member of the team to place, and he took first in the 1000-yard run. Billy Goldberg a Junior did fine in the 600, and added impetous to our speedy relay, which also consists of Johnny Harrington, Jimmy Downey and Bill Braithwaite. Wally Lyons, Gil Silvestre, Joe Wenckus and Jimmy Lang threw the shot-put, and certainly added strength to the team. Others who competed this year were: Joe Winn, Tommy Sgouros, Billy Kokinakio, Franny Silvestre, Jimmy White, Bob Whoriskey, Tom Lyons, Ted Esopt, Henry Lewis, Billy Maitheith and Manager Billy Magro.

An important factor in our winning has been the guidance and instruction of our coach Mr. Edmond Murphy. We feel confident that he and future track teams will have the success, that we have had in our four years in C. H. L. S.



Class Will

We, the class of 1945, supposedly being of sound mind and body, do hereby bequeath our most cherished possessions to the faculty and student body of dear old Cambridge High and Latin School:

To the FRESHMEN we leave Miss Hagerty and all her original musical compositions.

To the SOPHOMORES we leave the complacent feeling that they are no longer lowly freshmen.

To the JUNIORS we leave Mr. Danehy's hearty laugh and the problem of finding out, pronouncing, and remembering what K. B. stands for.

To the SENIORS we cheerfully leave our English classes with their weekly themes, novels, and compulsory seventh periods.

To Mr. Bramhall we leave, for the decoration of his office, the service flags from the various senior home rooms.

To Miss McElroy we leave a new clock, in perfect condition, for her office.

To Mr. Sheehan we leave a brand new joke and story book to consult before he disrupts a dignified sophomore English class.

To Miss Butler we leave a real poet in one of her English classes.

To Mr. Derry we leave an automatic window opener and shutter in order to save his valuable steps, especially on hot days.

To Miss Wait we leave our world famous "Unstarted Symphony."

To Mr. McKenna we leave a carefully drawn and labeled seating plan of the laboratory.

To Coach Murphy we leave a life subscription to the "Review."

To Miss Slade we leave a complete modern supply of typewriters and office machines.

To Miss Harrington we leave the fond memories of this year's K. B. formal.

To the athletic teams we leave the beautiful cheerleaders and their request for new sweaters.

To all the school organizations that plan to have dances we leave Freddy Sateriale's ever popular band.

To our classmates in the service and those about to go we leave our best wishes, sincere prayers for their welfare and safe return, and the knowledge that they are uppermost in our thoughts.

Witnessed and signed in this year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-five, by

Epilogue

Our high school career has ended, but it can not be forgotten. So that we may recall more vividly this joyful chapter of our life we have preserved in the preceding pages of this volume the record of our class along with the pictures of our friends and classmates.

We are launching ourselves upon a troubled world, but we are well-trained and filled with a desire to succeed. Our past was bright, our future is rocky, but we feel confident that we will triumph, and win our place in the world. We must leave, but we will always proudly acclaim our school, which gave us a start along life's road. No matter how widely we became separated, we shall always have one common bond, which we can cherish regardless of where we may be, namely that we are members of the 1945 class of Cambridge High and Latin School.

JAMES DOWNEY.
